Find Out Why Everyone Is

FLOCKING TO THE NORTH FORK

hile Covid-19 has brought changes to everyone, some trends have improved the quality of life. Many families are discovering the beauty and benefits of the North Fork and deciding to permanently relocate to what was formerly considered just a vacation lifestyle. Children are enrolling in local schools. Winter activities are being planned. The pandemic has revealed the importance of family and the benefits of being not just emotionally but geographically close to loved ones. And now, with the well-received condominiums at Harvest Pointe, those 55+ can live even closer to their children and grandchildren. Best of all, it's no longer necessary to expect seven-figure investments - Harvest Pointe homes begin at only $720,000.

"We wanted to give buyers a first-class experience with everything that makes a home perfect."

Carefree living and modern design are the hallmarks of Harvest Pointe in Cutchogue. Thoughtfully designed by owners and builders Robert Morrow and Jeffrey Rimland, the 124 condominiums are sited on 46 acres dotted with laurel, holly, juniper and magnolia trees.

Amidst this verdant setting are stunning residences featuring wood flooring, fireplaces, marble and granite kitchens and baths and, critically, two-car garages and full basements to make the transition to a smaller residence easy and seamless. Light, airy open layouts are enhanced by ground floor master suites.

"We designed homes that are move-in, furniture ready," Morrow notes. We wanted to give buyers a first-class experience with everything that makes a home perfect. Of course, upgrades are also available to satisfy personal tastes."

Beyond just a beautiful home and proximity to an ideal North Fork lifestyle, Harvest Pointe is a luxury community. Centered around a 6,200-square-foot clubhouse, it encourages owners to meet and mingle in the indoor/ outdoor resort-like amenities – saltwater swimming pool with private lounge areas, landscaped terrace with BBQs, bocce court, great rooms, meeting rooms, first class fitness center, tennis and pickleball courts. Even a wine cellar is on site with each home receiving a private, temperature-controlled locker. And to add to the luxury and convenience, a full-time concierge manager and staff attend to a multitude of resident requests. All activities and areas follow social distancing protocols at all times.

Only a few residences remain in Phase 2 with two-bedroom homes beginning at $720,000. Three bedrooms from $835,000 are currently sold out but will be available in Phase 3 and a waiting list is available for interested buyers.

Now is the time to take advantage of the move eastward at prices a fraction of the Hamptons. It's time to be enveloped by the carefree living and pleasant pace of the North Fork.

Covid compliant showings are available daily from 11 am – 5 pm by contacting Vicky Meigel, sales director for Harvest Pointe at 631-735-9300.

Stony Brook Southampton Hospital's Gala in Your Garden

SATURDAY, AUGUST 1, 7 P.M.

The hospital's annual gala, one of the longest-running and largest fundraisers in the Hamptons, returns in an exciting, experimental format. Supporters can purchase a "table," beginning at $5,000, with everything they need to host their own party—a selection of Wölffer Estate wines, a floral centerpiece, Montaukila tequila, hors d'oeuvres, cookies, margarita mix and gifts from Hamptons Handpoured Candles, Amagansett Salt Company and Southampton Soap Company. A lavish dinner from Calissa in Water Mill or 75 Main in Southampton can be included if ordered by Thursday, July 30 at 5 p.m. The event culminates in 7 minutes at 7 p.m., a virtual toast to the hospital's lifesaving employees hosted by East End actor Liev Schreiber. Table tickets include access to the toast, but toast-only tickets are available for $50 per person. Contact Kellie Pettit at kellie.pettit@stonybrookmedicine.edu or 631-726-8700 ext.8 for dinner accommodations. Visit southampton.stonybrookmedicine.edu/news/special-events for more event info.

Water Mill resident Kelly Ripa remembered former Live! host Regis Philbin following his death on Saturday, July 25. "For 28 years, Regis Philbin was just the man who worked at a studio around the corner at 67th and Columbus Avenue," Ripa said at the start of an emotional segment. "And for 11 of those years I had the rare privilege of being seated next to him, working with him." Ripa was Philbin's co-host from 2000 until his exit in 2011. She has been the show's host since, with Michael Strahan and now Ryan Seacrest as co-host. Live! with Kelly and Ryan aired a lovely tribute to Philbin, who lived to 88, with a variation of the seminal Rent song "Seasons of Love" that highlighted Philbin's 995,600 minutes of airtime as host of Live! and showed clips from throughout his storied career.

Call to Retire 'Shelter Island Indians' at High School

BY TAYLOR K. VECSEY

R acing increased pressure, the NFL franchise retired the Washington Redskins logo and nickname, following years of debate. Closer to home there is momentum building to stop the use of Native American mascots and logos, including at East Islip School, where the sports teams are called the Redmen. And in the small community of Shelter Island, there is divide over the high school moniker, the Indians, and the image that goes with. There has been a renewed call to discontinue its use, while others are making a push to hold onto what they say is a tradition that honors Native Americans, like the Manhanset tribe that occupied the island 4,000 years ago.

Last week, Lisa Kaasik, a Shelter Island School alumna, started an online petition to ask the Shelter Island School Board to "change the mascot and eliminate the stereotypes displayed around the school and on its website."

In four days, nearly 1,200 people virtually signed the petition.

"Shelter Island School has maintained its offensive and insensitive mascot of the Indians for far too long. It invites the abuse of stereotypes that perpetuate the injustices inflicted on the Native people," Kaasik wrote. "The image on the newly-painted gym floor is a blatant and historically inaccurate stereotype. An educational institution has the obligation to dismantle stereotypes, not encourage them and certainly not force the students to be proud of them."

The mascot costume was discontinued several years back. Kaasick raised the issue in 2013, the board decided it should instead call the board-approved "Indian" an icon or an emblem, instead of referring to it as a mascot. The image appears on the center circle of the basketball court, and a similar image and the name appear elsewhere.

Henry Binder, a 2020 graduate helped jumpstart the movement after organizing a Black Lives Matter protest on Shelter Island in June, said the "the Board of Education and the school district themselves decided to discard the mascot because they realized how racially insensitive this was to Native Americans. The school should do the same in this situation for the 'Indian' icon. We should not have to repeat ourselves and tell the school what they already know; this is wrong."

Since their petition began circulating on social media, two counter petitions have cropped up. "This mascot is a part of our Islands heritage and has been a symbol of our school's strength and achievements. We are proud of our mascot and would never change it," wrote Camryn Page, a 2019 graduate, on a Change.org petition she started. More than 900 have since signed.

"I believe that the Shelter Island School mascot is not racist, but far from it. If you have an issue with the name 'Indians' that is understandable, however the mascot should still remain as a Native American," wrote Luke Lowell-Liszanckie, a 2020 graduate who started the second petition. "By having an image of a Native American represent our school and its sports teams depicts a sense of strength. I view the Native Americans as a group of strong people."

He said he believes having a Native American represent the school is honoring them, "Letting their fighting spirit reflect our own. That image painted on the gym floor is not an inaccurate racial stereotype. It is a symbol of strength and perseverance," he wrote, suggesting islanders get feedback from the Shinnecock Indian Nation "on how best to continue to honor them."

"There are better ways to honor the traditions of the Shinnecock people or other Native Americas," Bryan Polite, the Council of Tribal Trustees' chairman, said when asked about the notion that the mascot honors Native Americans.

After looking at one of the counter petitions, he said, "No one asked them to depict a Native American as a mascot, and in fact we strongly oppose it. This is a very disingenuous petition and is not anyway tied to the reality of the situation."

Kathleen Lynch, the school board president, said she expects the petitions to come before the school board at its next meeting on August 17. "I look forward to the opportunity to have a community dialogue and hope we can reach a shared consensus," she said.

Emergency Care Facility Plan in the Works for East Hampton

BY T.E. McMORROW

fter two years of planning, a concrete governmental step was A taken last week towards the construction of a 23,830-square-foot Stony Brook Southampton Hospital emergency medical facility in East

"As many of you know, Southampton Hospital signed a lease with the town for the Pantigo Place ball fields for a future site for an emergency care center," Town Supervisor Peter Van Scoyoc said during the East Hampton Town Board's July 21 meeting, where the town board declared lead agency in the environmental review process, part of the overall approval process. The lease runs 50 years.

The facility is critical for East Hampton's future, Van Scoyoc explained, because Stony Brook Southampton Hospital will be moving further west to a new campus at the old Southampton College site.

"As you know, in any given summer, the travel times between Montauk and other portions of East Hampton to Southampton Hospital can be quite long. That is a cause for concern. There is a need for additional medical services within our community as our numbers continue to grow," Van Scoyoc said.

BY T.E. McMORROW

iverhead Town Justice Allen Smith, who was R in public service for most of his 77 years, died Saturday, July 25 at Southside Hospital in Bay Shore after suffering a brain aneurysm. He had suffered a heart attack earlier this year but had recovered.

"Justice Smith devoted his entire life to public service," said Town Supervisor Yvette M. Aguiar. "A pillar of the community, he brought integrity and rectitude to all of Riverhead," she said.

Smith started his career as a town attorney, before JUSTICE ALLEN SMITH being elected Town Supervisor in 1975. After losing his bid for a third term in 1979, he joined the Suffolk District Attorney's office. Later, he opened his own law practice in Riverhead.

In 2000, Riverhead Town Justice Henry Saxtein passed away and Smith was appointed to fill out the last few months of his term. That fall, he was elected to the bench as one of Riverhead's two judges and has been re-elected every four years since.

In recent years, he has been cross endorsed and has run unopposed, as he was for what would have been his re-election to a sixth term this November.

Since 2003, he has served along with Southampton's Justice Deborah Kooperstein at the East End Regional Intervention Drug Court, which helps give addicts facing criminal charges a second chance.

A Southampton Democrat, she said Monday that she and Justice Smith, a Republican, were, to some, an unlikely pair. "We both believed in the power of restorative justice and brought that alternative to the East End by establishing a Treatment Court for the five Towns on the East End of Long Island," she said.

"For over 18 years he and I worked closely together, traveled together and attended trainings all over the country. We became friends. We talked about many things candidly and openly. He meant a great deal to me and I will miss him very much," she said.

project from the town's architectural review board and planning board.

The East Hampton Town Board still has the bulk of the work to do. It must consider and approve a State Environmental Quality Review Act document, and, most importantly, approve a zoning change for the 4.5acre site. It is currently zoned parks-recreation, which needs to be changed to commercial-industrial.

Board member Kathee Burke-Gonzalez said the planning board will take the matter up next week, and the ARB the following week. Burke-Gonzalez said the town board would have a work session discussion of the SEQRA document the first week of September, after which the board could vote on it.

REMEMBERING RICK MURPHY

A tribute to investigative journalist, columnist

BY JESSICA MACKIN-CIPRO

By Rick Murphy

RICK'S SPACE

Rick Murphy, who worked for the Independent for 17 years, died on July 21 at the age of 70 at Southampton Hospital. His wife, Karen Fredericks, was by his side.

As one of the most established journalists in Suffolk County, Murphy held awards from national and New York and Long Island newspaper associations. He has been nominated for a Pulitzer award twice and he was a six-time winner of New York Press Association's award for Best Column.

Murphy worked a number of jobs before his journalism career began in 1987, holding positions at The Sag Harbor Herald, The East Hampton Star and The New York Times.

He joined The Independent as Editor-In-Chief in 2003 and, in 2016, he was named co-Executive Editor, a position he held until June.

Rick was known for his investigative journalism. He uncovered greed and corruption across the East End for decades, including East Hampton Town's misuse of the Community Preservation Fund, which brought on a county investigation.

He told the stories of those abused by pedophile priests on Long Island. He did extensive coverage of Deepwater Wind Farm. He wrote in-depth about local and state politics, hosting debates with candidates at The Independent office. He was also a supporter of high school sports and covered the Bridgehampton Killer Bees basketball team extensively over the years.

Not only was he an acclaimed investigative journalist, Murphy also interviewed many of the great rock and roll legends of the '60s and '70s. The most recent was John Lodge of the Moody Blues, who performed at Suffolk Theater right before the COVID-19 shutdown. In 2014 he led a special pre-concert Q&A with The Zombies at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center.

Aside from a nose for news, Murphy's personality shined through in his "Rick's Space" column.

He was married to Fredericks, also a writer and cartoonist, on May 4,

He wrote about their East Hampton home together in a recent column in The Independent. "It was brand new when we moved in 24 years ago, a week before we got married, so we matured together, that is if we are indeed mature, which is questionable, at least in my case."

As a tradition, the two spent every anniversary dining at the Palm Restaurant in East Hampton. He was a fan of fine foods and often detailed his love of cooking.

"I'm all up in Thanksgiving. Despite my somewhat cynical public persona, we're all about giving and caring at our house," he wrote in his column in 2018.

"I like to honor my forefathers by cooking a suitable Thanksgiving feast. Well, actually, it was my foremothers who did the cooking because my forefathers, like most of the men in my family, were inveterate gamblers who bet on just about everything, especially football games. That doesn't work nowadays, because, as many regular readers know, Karen is incapable of cooking anything edible. Once, early in our marriage, she insisted on cooking a holiday dinner. All of us, including her family, sat around with a foreboding sense of dread. Many of us drank heavily, even the children," he continued.

Murphy was born May 11, 1950 to parents Stanley Murphy and Eleanor Murphy (nee: Forcucci). He studied at St. Augustine High School in Brooklyn and graduated from Long Island University. He later taught writing at Southampton College.

Rick grew up in Brooklyn and spent summers in Sag Harbor before moving to the East End full time. He often wrote about his family in his column.

His grandfather, Enrico Forcucci, was the first to establish roots in Sag Harbor. He was drafted by the U.S. Army after becoming a citizen and fought in World War I. "His name is on the big rock by Otter Pond across from Mashashimuet Park with the other VFW members," Murphy wrote.

"He left a wife and daughter in Italy and came back to Sag Harbor after the war, eventually buying the little white house at the foot of Howard Street that was split in two and shared with another Italian family. Then he sent for my grandmother, Fillippa, and my oldest aunt, Adelia. He had two more daughters, Lucille and my mother, Elenora."

"He was Big Rico, so of course they called me Little Rick. He took a shine to me," Murphy recalled.

Many times Murphy wrote about his childhood summers in Sag Harbor.

"My generation seemed tougher than this one," he wrote. "My mom went to Pierson in Sag Harbor and she said the school never closed and she never missed a day. Kids got sick, just like today, but they got up and went to school. 'That's because it was a privilege to go to school,' she related. As an immigrant's daughter, there was tremendous pressure on her to succeed. That meant she had to deal with Papa, who was a Sicilian, or go to school. School was easier.

"I wasn't a tough kid, but I had smarts," he recalled. "I wasn't very pugnacious, but I became a very fast runner and befriended the biggest kids. Once in a while, though, someone would accuse me of being a bigmouth (how dare they?) or even worse, being obnoxious (me?). That meant I'd have to duke it out."

"My big sister and brother called me, the baby of the family, Klumpus," he said. "That's because I must have been a little awkward."

In 2017, he interviewed his mother for an article in The Independent titled "Remembering Sag Harbor Circa 1937."

"They didn't let us go out at night," Eleanor said of her parents. "The Italians were very strict."

The home, built in the 1770s, did not have heat other than a stove in the kitchen. They'd place hot bricks under the beds to keep warm at night. The home did not include an indoor bathroom, but an outhouse in the yard.

Eleanor left for Brooklyn State Nursing School where she met her and eventually rose steadily up the ranks to the top spot: Director of Nursing," read the article.

The family returned to Sag Harbor, with Rick and his two siblings, every summer. "It started to change. It seemed a little classier," his mother recalled.

"Mostly there are the memories," Murphy wrote. "The generations who shared the trips to Long Beach, the clams on the half shell, the plump heirloom tomatoes from Enrico's garden and the hot fudge sundaes at the Paradise.

"The old brass post office box 874, about 120 years old, is still in the family. While Grandma was still in Italy she would send Papa love letters to that box. Stanley would send letters to Eleanor while he was in the city, and so on."

Murphy was also an animal lover and supported animal rescue foundations like Animal Rescue Fund of the Hamptons and RSVP Rescue Dogs. Once he shaved his head to raise $5,000 for RSVP, an organization run by Frank and Linda Mosca.

The story appeared on the cover of The Independent on May 16, 2007. "I realized how much he and his wife were doing for the dogs and my wife expect such deep wells of tenderness." 🔎 husband Stanley Murphy. "He worked at Brooklyn State for 40 years Karen and I decided to help out the best we could," Murphy wrote. He pledged to shave his head if he could raise $5,000. To make it more dramatic, he held off on a haircut for six months prior. "Most of the money came in $10 and $15 donations from dog lovers," he said. "It really touched me."

"He's such a funny guy that you wouldn't expect such deep wells of tenderness," his wife said at the time.

The caption for the cover image read: "When David Wright of the New York Mets shaved his head last week, his teammates, in show of solidarity, shaved theirs. No such loyalty at The Independent. The staff did, however, model a trunk load of wigs for Rick to select from while his dome refurbishes itself."

Around the same time, Murphy wrote a column that included an image of himself and Jerry Della Femina, the paper's publisher at the time, as Dr. Evil and Mini Me from the movie Austin Powers.

COVID CARELESSNESS

What really happened at Chainsmokers concert?

BY TAYLOR K. VECSEY AND JESSICA MACKIN-CIPRO

THE CHAINSMOKERS PERFORM IN BRIDGEHAMPTON

New York State's top official wants answers from Southampton Town officials about why a drive-in fundraiser concert, called "Safe & Sound" and featuring the Grammy-award winning Chainsmokers, was ever allowed to take place Saturday given all the state regulations in place to address the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic.

In a letter sent to Supervisor Jay Schneiderman, Dr. Howard Zucker said he was "greatly disturbed" by reports of the Bridgehampton concert, "which apparently involved thousands of people in close proximity, out of their vehicles, a VIP area where there was no pretense of a vehicle, and generally not adhering to social guidance."

A video taken from the stadium-like stage set up at Nova's Ark went viral by the weekend's end and left many questioning if social distancing rules were in place at the 600-car event. The cars were supposed to park in designated 20-by-15-foot or larger spaces on the 100-acre property and the occupants were supposed stay in that spot.

"I am at a loss as to how the Town of Southampton could have issued a permit for such an event, how they believed it was legal and not an obvious public health threat," Zucker wrote.

On Monday evening, Governor Andrew Cuomo said in a Tweet he was appalled. During a conference call with members of the press on Tuesday, he said, "The concert that happened in the Town of Southampton was just a gross violation of not only the public health rules, it was a gross violation of common sense. It was grossly disrespectful to fellow New Yorkers..."

Schneiderman, who performed with his band as an opening act, said that the concert organizers did not adhere to the permitted plan, which was for guests to listen to the performances from their socially distanced parking spots only. Additional openers included singer-songwriter Matt White and DJ D-Sol (Goldman Sachs' CEO David Solomon). Instead, organizers, he said, opened a VIP section directly in front of the stage as if it was a prepandemic performance.

The event, which was produced by In The Know Experiences and Invisible Noise Productions, was held as a fundraiser with all profits from the evening donated to No Kid Hungry, Southampton Fresh Air Home and Children's Medical Fund of New York. Each are supposed to receive a minimum of $10,000 plus a percent of ticket sales, according to the permit.

The supervisor said he believes that crowd of about 200 was made up of people from behind the stage. "It wasn't that the crowd rushed the stage. People from back stage moved into this area that had some level of credential. That's why I have asked the organizer to identify all those individuals to make sure no one is COVID positive."

Schneiderman noted that the Town of Hempstead held a drive-in concert with double the amount of cars. "We're all trying to find ways to safely do things and we've been working really hard to stop the spread of COVID-19," Schneiderman said. "I'm as upset about it as anyone." In his letter, Zucker demanded answers within 24 hours to various questions, including whether the town issued a permit for the concert, how the permit was consistent with state regulations and laws concerning COVID-19 and what security presence was in place. Lastly, the health commissioner wants to know: "What town officials were at the concert and why was it allowed to continue when it became clear violations were rampant?"

The concert that happened in the Town of Southampton was just a gross violation of not only the public health rules...it was grossly disrespectful to fellow New Yorkers.

-Governor Cuomo

Schneiderman contends police did take action, shutting down the event at 10:30 p.m., which was, according to the permit, the time the show was scheduled to end. The organizers are facing a citation.

Schneiderman said he was furious that organizers deviated from the plan. He said he was excited about the charitable concert and the chance to perform, his first live performance since the pandemic began. "Even when I performed at the beginning of the show, there was no VIP area," Schneiderman said. "At some point during the evening they opened up that area and that's unfortunate...we would never have approved that."

The supervisor said he did not stay for the whole evening, but left when a person he came with had an allergy attack, but before that, he said he saw "what was happening" and voiced his concerns to the private security, reportedly headed by former Southampton Town Police Chief Bill Wilson. "That VIP section was not acceptable. I told staff there that it was unacceptable and they needed to fix it," he said.

Drive-in concerts are currently permitted as long as patrons remain in their vehicle during the performance, except to use rest room facilities, according to the Governor's office. The venue must also follow guidelines in regards to disinfecting and social distancing.

In a statement on behalf of In The Know Experiences and Invisible Noise, the organizers said the fundraiser followed the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention guidelines.

"We collaborated with all state and local health officials to keep everyone safe, create awareness for local businesses, provide work to over 350 people who have been unemployed as a result of the pandemic and to bring some joy into people's lives during these difficult times," the organizers wrote.

Tickets started at $250 per person for a six-person sport utility vehicle and went up to $25,000 for a package that included a recreational vehicle for a group of 10. Guests received instructions to self-monitor for COVID-19 symptoms by checking their temperature daily for two weeks leading up to the event, the organizers said.

Those in attendance were asked to disclose if they had tested positive for the virus or if they were in contact with anyone who tested positive within the last two weeks, according to the organizers. When concert-goers arrived, each had their temperatures taken and were given complimentary face masks before driving to their designated parking space. They were instructed that they could not leave their spots for any reason other than to use the restroom facilities provided on the grounds.

"Announcements and reminders were made every 30 minutes from the main stage, and security guards regularly patrolled the area to encourage mask wearing and promote social distancing guidelines," the statement continued.

"The rest of the crowd, for the most part, stayed in their cubicles. They wore masks when they went to the bathroom. Not everybody, but for the most part they social distanced, and I think most people considered it a safe event," said Schneiderman.

Southampton Village Mayor Jesse Warren, who emceed the event, said late

Andrew Cuomo 🔮

Videos from a concert held in Southampton on Saturday show egregious social distancing violations. I am appalled.

The Department of Health will conduct an investigation.

We have no tolerance for the illegal & reckless endangerment of public health.

GOVERNOR ANDREW CHOMO TWEETED HIS DISAPPROVAL OF THE LACK OF SOCIAL DISTANCING

Monday night, that as he addressed the crowd early in the evening from the stage, "I was very clear that our country had over 1,000 deaths yesterday (as in Friday) and that tonight we need to do our part and to wear a mask and remain in the designated area."

In addition to the citation, organizers will likely get a bill that is double the $6,000 to $7,000 they initially agreed to pay for the police presence required at the event. Schneiderman said Chief Steven Skrynecki was there early in the evening and determined more police officers were needed.

Traffic was backed up on Scuttlehole and Millstone Roads, leading into Nova's Ark, and emergency responders reported difficulties traversing the area. Neighbors complained to police about the noise reverberating through the largely residential neighborhood.

"I would not have gotten involved if I knew they were going to violate New York state protocols," the supervisor said.

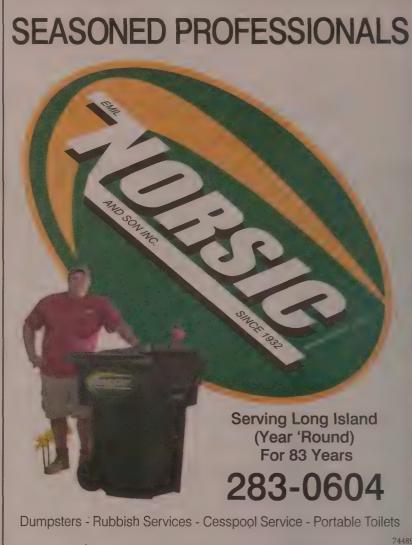

"It is not everyday that a big band like the Chainsmokers come into town. People are a little stir crazy," he said. "You want to help these charities out. You want to find ways to do it that are safe. You rely on responsible parties."

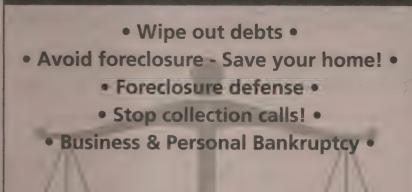

Meanwhile, Cuomo issued a warning. "It's not just the concert in the Hamptons. I want local governments to understand that we take this very seriously. The Town of Southampton is going to have a problem. I don't know how they approved that permit," Cuomo said. Violations of public health law have civil fines and potential for criminal liability, he said.

Town officials will also now have to mull over whether to continue with two town-organized drive-in concerts in Hampton Bays, planned in August, though they are on a much smaller scale.

Betting on Sharks

Tracking the Great Whites as They Race One Another in the ocean Off the Hamptons

BY DAN RATTINER

Just before the Fourth of July weekend, an outfit called MyBookie.com announced that bets could be placed on the sharks swimming around in the Atlantic and whether they are offshore here in the Hamptons or anywhere else in a particular timeframe.

The head oddsmaker of MyBookie, David Strauss (The New York Times points out that Strauss is his "professional" name), noting there had been a serious decline in betting since many sporting events had been cancelled heading into summer, had latched onto the idea of betting on the sharks and who among them might get somewhere first to sort of take up the slack.

The betting would not be just on any shark. MyBookie was aware, as are many of us, that there is an organization that rounds up sharks and fits them with GPS beeping tags to help determine their migration and behavior patterns. Many tend to swim further south in the winter months and north in the summer—which is when the dangerous and laborious art of tagging them takes place here off Nova Scotia, Cape Cod, the Hamptons, the Jersey Shore and the Outer Banks. So far, the nonprofit scientific organization Ocearch has tagged nearly 400 sharks.

On their website, Ocearch has a map of the East Coast that in real time shows each shark's location. They also allow the online public to propose names for each shark, which Ocearch considers and then assigns to one shark or another. (Unama'ki has been tracked near Montauk.) MyBookie, looking online at this world of sharks, chose nine great whites to place bets upon. You might race them or bet on how often their tag would beep. But the gambling site had the betting open, $50 to $5000, for only a very short time when they heard from Ocearch members requesting that MyBookie put a stop to it.

According to the Times, Ocearch and MyBookie negotiating to see where this all might lead. It seems to me that a deal with MyBookie might go a long way in getting better public awareness about sharks, an interest in ecologly and nature and, well, maybe just a lot more hits.

The Shark Betting area is still there on MyBookie, alongside the NFL, MLB, the NBA and so forth and so on, but the message under Shark Betting says "There are currently no lines available for this sport. Either there are no odds open to bet on, or the sport is not in season at this time. You can check back soon..."

This story was first reported in Forbes, which caters to Wall Street—where betting on things goes on in a big way. (A Wall Street trader will bet on how many times a tennis ball you throw will bounce before hitting a wall on the trading floor.) A follow-up story in The New York Times featured interviews with Melissa Cristia Marquez, head of Fins United Initiative, Chris Fischer, founder of Ocearch, and others. Opinions were expressed to and fro. Of course, nobody seemed to have thought about what the sharks might think.

In any case, having read this, I downloaded the Ocearch app and now with the press of a button can see where all the sharks are in real time.

This afternoon, here, sitting under an umbrella at Main Beach in East Hampton, I am offering my services to anyone who wants to come by—six feet distancing, of course—curious to know if there is a shark at this moment swimming close to our pavilion. It could be important information, of course, and I can answer that question in a jiffy. I do this at no charge, but there is a caveat, which I tell whoever asks. The caveat is that I am reporting only on the 385 particular sharks who have tags on them, and I am not reporting on the 500,000 or so other sharks that swim around in the ocean off our shores, gobbling up whatever they gobble up, because they do not come up on my cell phone.

So it's sort of a crap shoot.

More time being spent at home means finding more ways to enjoy and expand one's environs.

From pools to porches, office spaces to outdoor entertaining areas, our gathering of East End real estate insiders and experts share their insights into what homeowners are looking for among the many amenities available on the North Fork and in the Hamptons.

Covered porches, living rooms with indoor/ outdoor features, in-home gyms, home offices.

What are the key amenities buyers and homeowners are most desiring in a property right now? We're seeing a demand for multiple options for home offices, separate living spaces and outdoor amenities. Buyers are focusing more on the properties features, rather than where it's located.

The "amenity" people are asking for these days is "one more room." The world has turned. Demand for homes outside the metropolis is significant. People are telling us that they want a home with that extra room—for an office or just a getaway during an extended stay.

Located south of the highway with open reserve views, is this well maintained postmodern home on nearly 1 acre. The sunlit great room has vaulted ceilings and a fireplace which looks out to the expansive pool area and manicured lawn.

I find the number one request is acreage. Buyers want space and options for their families, the ability to customize a house for their specific needs. If a home does not already have a separate guest house, buyers want the acreage to add one. Outdoor entertaining spaces have become as important as the main kitchen. To be honest, what people considered to be an amenity, such as a media room, is now considered essential. Buyers want everything now. Their weekend getaway now needs to be a true sanctuary.

House designs, like clothing, change with the times. What was fashionable yesterday is just that—yesterday's news. Modern, flat roofs, floor-toceiling windows that bring the outside in, decks on the roof overlooking wide expanses. That is what many buyers are looking for in today's market. At the high end, recreational amenities both inside and out are in high demand. Gyms, movie theaters, gas fireplaces, pool rooms inside. For outside, infinity pools and spas, pool houses with outdoor TVs and a sunken tennis court, The list is neverending.

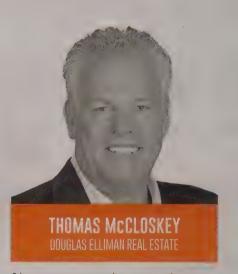

Buyers looking now are focused on a stylish, comfortable and safe haven. A good kitchen with adjacent family room is very appealing and suits many for all those family dinners prepared and enjoyed at home. In addition, great outdoor space is very important to city dwellers. It offers a sense of freedom and relief to see the sky and green gardens to those otherwise confined to an apartment.

The trend of maximizing outdoor living with covered porches that include outdoor kitchens and living rooms has grown exponentially especially now that we are being encouraged to dine outdoors and socialize outside. You can double the size of your entertaining space by smartly utilizing your outdoor living spaces.

I have seen some changes in the post-NY Pause marketplace in what buyers are looking for. A pool was always on a wish list, but now it has become almost mandatory. Buyers are also considering houses with more bedrooms than before, with the idea of making a home office or two out of extra bedrooms. Open floorplans are still on most secondary homebuyers' wish lists.

ASCENIC DRIVE THROUGH EAST END ARCHITECTURE

BY JOHN P. LAFFEY

Hamptons architecture showcases a rich visual diversity of history and design. The architectural vernacular of the area spans from the 1660 Halsey House in Southampton to the cutting-edge Parrish Art Museum in Water Mill.

An ideal activity is to drive around the East End and admire the passage of time, marked by the juxtaposition of traditional and contemporary architecture.

EAST END ARCHITECTURE

"In the village of East Hampton, don't miss Jaffe's 'Gates of the Grove,' the beautifully designed Jewish Center of the Hamptons.
The modern addition to a traditional building boasts an incredible glass ceiling."

Top: A beautiful home on Gin lane Bottom: Jewish Center of the Hamptons, designed by Norman Jaffe

Starting your drive in Westhampton Beach, head east down Dune Road. This narrow strip of barrier land has some of the most eclectic architecture you will find in the area. The homes share the commonality of being designed for beach living. Dune Road offers everything from the shingle style homes of the 1880s to the postmodern homes of the '60s and the modern steel and glass structures of today.

Then, it's off to Southampton Village for a jaunt down Gin Lane. This street is ripe with the homes of the old world aristocracy, as they meet the ultra clean lines of modernism. There are few streets in the Hamptons where you can experience sights like the storied shingled gables of the Meadow Club and a fully restored Norman Jaffe design within walking distance of each other. (Jaffe is the father of Modernist houses on the East End) In Bridgehampton, take a right at the monument down Ocean Road, passing the colonial architecture at the square and head toward the ocean. The last street on the left is Surfside Drive. Head east. This tiny little street has the entire field guide to American architecture on it. You start with shingle style architecture and progress to everything from the adobe style of the Southwest to one of the finest examples of Frank Lloyd Wright—inspired design in the area.

The next village is Sagaponack for a trip down Daniels Lane. Heading east, you will pass original summer cottages, shingle style homes, contemporary architecture and a glimpse at one of the largest homes in America, the Rennert estate, which can best be seen from a stroll down to Peter's Pond Beach.

At the duck pond, make a right on Ocean Avenue, and enjoy the estate section, as you take a right onto Lilly Pond Lane. This street and area is home to some of the best examples of East End architecture from every decade.

After brief stops along Cottage Drive and Lee Avenue Drive, head east again. Dunemere Lane has numerous summer colony homes from the Gilded Age and will lead you on to Further Lane, past the storied Maidstone golf clubhouse. Then head toward Amagansett on Bluff Road. You pass the community of Beach Hampton, which boasts the wild architecture of the '50s and '60s. Try to take note of perhaps the most iconic symbol of postmodern architecture of the 1960s—the home architect Charles Gwathmey built for his parents. The angular structure catapulted Gwathmey into worldwide acclaim.

Finish the tour by heading through Napeague and onto Old Montauk Highway. This windy, hilly, old cow path of a road holds architectural treasures that are best discovered from a slow-moving vehicle.

Enjoy the fantastic journey through the heart of some of the finest architecture in the country. John Laffey is an architect in Water Mill. Visit johnlaffeyarchitects.com.

aria Baum was trading derivatives and proprietary capital for a large bank when she and husband Larry decided to walk away from the intensity of Wall Street for Sag Harbor and "go enjoy life."

"It was a career I enjoyed immensely," Baum says, "But I had also just given birth to my third child and was finding it increasingly difficult to balance both worlds. Pre-COVID, it was just not acceptable to have a job like that and work from home. We came very close to moving to Italy then, but were also drawn to the beauty and small-town feel of the Hamptons."

In the end, she says. "Sag Harbor won our hearts, as it felt like the perfect place to raise our children year-round. We did, eventually, buy a home in Italy as well, but having our kids—now four of them—grow up here on the East End has been such a joy. We are very grateful that we made that crazy decision over a decade ago!"

But it proved not to be a complete retirement for the soon-to-be restaurateur. "It took less than a week for me to realize that I was too young to simply retire," she says. "Larry and I are both entrepreneurs at heart, so it wasn't long before we started building some businesses."

The first business was a boutique capital markets recruiting firm they founded together, Bay Street Advisors, and eventually opened their first restaurant, Tutto II Giorno. "We built three of those before eventually selling the business to our other partners. Larry and I kept the Sag Harbor space and opened a new restaurant there, Dopo La Spiaggia with Maurizio Marfoglia, our then-chef/GM who is now a partner in all of our new restaurants."

Dopo in Sag Harbor was a hit, so they opened an East Hampton location, as well. And this summer they will introduce a sister restaurant, Argento, on Main Street in Southampton.

Aside from her own restaurants, some of Baum's favorite stops for food on the East End include picking up fresh mozzarella from Red Horse Market or Villa in East Hampton. She tries "to get it while still warm and 'squeeky."

"It sounds crazy to be opening a new restaurant during a pandemic, but we really believe in our staff and know that we have another hit on our hands," says Baum.

One of her latest endeavors is Splash Mixers, a line of better-for-you cocktail drink mixers. It's "the one I devote all of my efforts to now," says Baum. She conceived Splash Mixers after "noticing a void in an otherwise flooded consumer beverage industry...I found nothing that had the potential to become a truly ubiquitous category killer, so I invented one!" Splash Mixers are "low calorie, low sugar, natural, non-GMO" and, of course, tasty. It also needed to be in a glass bottle, to avoid plastic, and "be pretty enough to go anywhere." The project hit a few snags thanks to COVID-19, but Baum, an experienced businesswoman, was able to pivot. "The good news is that we found that we have a product that brought some smiles during these difficult times," she says. "It helped people connect during isolation, as friends were sending Splash to one another and arranging to meet for virtual cocktails online."

While Baum and Larry both still work a great deal, she credits her move to the East End for giving them the "flexibility to be present whenever our kids need us...We love our nightly family dinners and especially love to cook together with fresh produce from our garden at this time of year."

The family lives in a traditional Hamptons-style home overlooking the bay in Sag Harbor. "I make the kids open their curtains and really see the view we are so blessed with each morning," she says. "I will never tire of it—the way the light changes the scenery so intensely each day. I still pinch myself when I have my morning coffee."

Baum's home is "beautiful, but very accessible, as we have a large family with dogs and tons of visitors. We want our dinner guests to feel as comfortable as our kids and their friends do. I think that's what defines Hamptons style—that beachy, casual elegance that revolves around nature, those views and the light."

Time spent at home has created more time together with her family over the past few months. "Since our three eldest children now either work or go away to school, [the quarantine] provided us the opportunity to have everyone together here again for an extended time, which has been just amazing," she says. "I am reminded of how lucky we are to have a home base like this that they always love to come back to. It's hard to say there has been an upside to COVID-19, but it did cause us to renew that feeling we had when we first chose to move here. We are all reminded of what matters most as we seek to pack as much joy and appreciation into each day as we can."

Baum also works with Breast Cancer Research Foundation (BCRF) and created "Paddle & Party for Pink" nine years ago. While Baum was going through her own treatment for breast cancer, she found it to be a positive outlet for her. "Paddleboarding on these beautiful bays really helped heal me when I was going through chemo and that was the impetus for this big idea to give back," she says. "The Hamptons community really embraced the event in a huge way and I am very proud to say that together, we have raised over $12 million to fund research." This year, the event is on pause, and Baum is going through her own treatment for breast cancer again. "I do hope we can bring the event back next summer," she says.

In the present, East End continues to bring peace and comfort. "We really love it here," Baum says. "And we know how lucky we are to call his magical place our home."

MASTER CRAFTSMAN RAY HARTJEN, EAST END CLASSIC BOAT SOCIETY

Days precious days
They roll in and out like waves
I got boards to bend, I got planks to nail
I got charts to make, I got seas to sail
I'm gonna build me a boat
With these two hands
It'll be a fair curve
From a noble plan
Let the chips fall where they will 'Cause I've got boats to build
—"Boats to Build" by Guy Clark

It's a lot of hammering and nailing."

There is a romance, without question, to a wooden boat, something that inspires songwriters as much as sailors. It is a feeling conjured by the image of a vintage vessel on the sea, but as East End Classic Boat Society president Ray Hartjen's words suggest, the foundation of that feeling lies in the hands-on skill, the time and dedication of an artisan to bring that romantic vision to life.

A lot of hammering and nailing. And a lot of history and passion.

Water and the vessels that take us upon it are among the few aspects of Long Island life that seamlessly connect past, present and future. Hartjen and his fellow aficionados remain dedicated to preserving the unique art of creating boats not merely in the manner of generations before us, but in the spirit. Just over two decades ago, the society was established to celebrate the traditions and skills of classic boat making—design, construction, maintenance, seamanship—while welcoming both experienced shipwrights and novices alike.

It begins with the wood. A craftsperson is only as good as their materials, some might say, and those used to create these boats are "very specific," Hartjen notes. Such is the challenge inherent in using traditional methods toward an end result that will be held to the highest of standards.

Locally, the society members use a harvested white oak for the ribs of the boat when available. Hand-dried lumber is preferred over kiln-dried. The seats are all mahogany. "The most interesting wood to work with is Atlantic white cedar that comes out of the Panhandle of Florida," says Hartjen. This particular wood travels north to the Liberty Cedar sawmill in Rhode Island, and twice a week they come out to the East End to deliver it to the society.

"These planks are so impressive," Hartjen admires. "Some of them can be as much as 20 to 24 inches wide and clear of knots. It's one of the most beautiful woods you can think of."

The society orders the wood with extra thickness, twice as thick as they need, then use a pattern and split the wood in half. "A very unique feature of our boat building is that every plank and every boat built is bookmatched," says Hartjen. "The grain on one side of the boat matches the grain on the other side of the boat. I don't believe anybody else in the country is doing that level of sophistication."

It all takes place at the Hartjen–Richardson Community Boat Shop in Amagansett. "The East End Classic Boat Society existed in the '90s, and they were always looking for a place to build their boats," says Hartjen. Members were working in spaces from Sag Harbor to Springs when they decided it was time to a rent space.

"The town had this land next to the Marine Museum," Hartjen recalls. He made the presentation to the town and the rest, as they say, is history. The Hartjen–Richardson Community Boat Shop was built in 2008, quickly evolving into a place where the craftsmanship goes hand-in-hand with a dedication to community.

"If you come to the boat shop any Wednesday or Saturday, you'll find the parking lot jammed with cars. These are all senior citizens. Many come without any boat-building skills," says Hartjen, noting that they are "thrilled to have an opportunity to interact socially and to learn boat building skills." The society also has created an education program, headed by Stuart Close, with middle and elementary school students in Montauk, Amagansett, Springs and East Hampton—building tiny sail boats that the kids assemble and sail in local waters. "To make that happen," Hartjen explains, "we have people around the shop that are building these little marvel boats day in and day out."

As a way of raising funds to continue its work while sharing their craft with the East End, each year the society raffles off one of its creations—a 12' to 13' classic wooden rowing and sailing boat that takes 8 to 10 months of shaping and pounding to build. Raffle tickets have traditionally been sold at a number of sites and fairs across East End throughout the summer and fall, and the lucky winner gets a piece of one-of-a-kind artwork that is both beautiful and usable.

"We have this $8,000 to $10,000 boat with trailer and sails that we essentially give away to somebody that may have bought a $5 raffle ticket," says Hartjen. "Over the course of 10 to 12 years, we have that many boats out and around East Hampton."

Although this year the "raffle is on hold because we're dependent on the venues" as points of sale, says Hartjen, the mission of the society goes on, and so does the support. Many community members donate boats that can be restored by the society and resold to offset costs. "In this time when we don't have income from the raffle tickets, because we have ongoing expenses, we're selling boats on the side," says Hartjen.

When COVID-19 hit, the society shut its doors to members for a few months, but they are back open now, although operating cautiously. Everyone wears masks, all doors and windows remain open, and members practice social distancing. Their craft requires a communal approach, but it is one that has always been rooted in patience, in a precise approach and knowing how to take old practices and make them work in changing times. Keep hammering and nailing and carrying the past into the future. They've got boats to build.

BY DAN RATTINER

Definition of Jitney: 1. An unlicensed taxicab. 2. A small bus that carries passengers over a regular route on a flexible schedule. 3. Slang for 'nickel'

Jim Davidson, a young entrepreneur living in Water Mill, got the idea for the Hampton Jitney. But it wasn't for buses that would go back and forth between the Hamptons and Manhattan. Jim's idea, in 1973, was to have several 10-passenger vans travel back and forth along the Montauk Highway between Southampton and Amagansett, pulling a bicycle rack on wheels. You'd hail it anywhere along the way with just a wave. You'd put your bike in the rack, climb in and go to the next Hampton, get off and bike to where you wanted to go. The Hampton Jitney busses would appear at half-hour intervals. You'd pay 25¢ per town. It would be a big hit. But it wasn't.

Anyway, in the summer of 1974, he tried it. A huge gas crisis was happening everywhere in America. There were long lines at the few gas stations that had gas. And the price had gone up five times from the year before. President Ford said we'd have to make do. We needed to use less gas and oil. "Don't run your dishwasher until it is completely filled with dishes," he famously said.

Jim was a close friend of mine, and I tried to help him with his service. Three months after it began, I wrote an editorial. "From the window of my office on the Montauk Highway, I can watch the Hampton Jitney bus service rumble by. As near as I can see, only a few people are using it. Here is a method for getting from any one spot to any other on the Montauk Highway for just 25¢. Give it a try."

Jim tried the service a second year, adding stops not only on the highway but also at the beaches. He stopped at Coopers Beach in Southampton before downtown, Main Beach in East Hampton, Indian Wells Beach in Amagansett and Asparagus Beach, also in Amagansett. That is Atlantic Avenue beach today. They called it Asparagus Beach back then because it was a beach where young singles, drinks in hand, stood and mingled rather than lay on towels. Like a field of asparagus, somebody said.

In the third year, 1976, Jim continued with the service, but then, for the first time, he also quietly offered a minivan that would leave the Hamptons at 11 a.m. and go to New York City, arriving at the Upper East Side around 1:30 p.m. It carried 10 passengers, all of whom chatted away as if they were at a party on wheels. They were serviced coffee and returned at 7. This was a stunning success. There were waiting lists to use that trip, and so he added a second, which left Southampton at 3 p.m., then stayed overnight and came back the next day, leaving at 2 p.m. And thus Hampton Jitney, as we know it today, was born.

By 1978, with the up-and-down-the-highway route quietly abandoned, six vans were going back and forth between the Hamptons and New York City every day. But the permission given from the city had been only to allow vehicles with a maximum of 23 passengers each.

"Jim Davidson's mini-bus is cool, comfortable and relaxing," I wrote. "It is the civilized way to get from the Hamptons into Manhattan and this newspaper would like to encourage readers to use it when the opportunity arises."

In early January 1979, Jim applied to the powers that be in Manhattan to allow him to use full 39-passenger luxury busses for the back and forth to New York. He would provide snacks and drinks onboard, and there would be an attendant. The busses would have a bathroom in the back. A public hearing in Manhattan was held in March. A crowd of Hamptonites were there to plead the case with Jim. Nobody spoke against it. But a week after the hearing, Harold Fisher, the President of the MTA and the Long Island Rail Road, wrote a letter, objecting. He said it would impact railroad service. So we had a second hearing. By April, the resolution passed.

The new full-size coaches were gorgeous. They were painted forest green. The art department at Dan's Papers made a new logo for the Hampton Jitney, which remains in use today. The design came from Thom Speckenbach, the art director at the paper at the time.

Artist Roy Lichtenstein designed the wavy lines that added a final touch to the logo some years later. And some of the more well known riders volunteered radio commercials, praising the service. Lauren Bacall did a few. In those early busses, the second language on the interior signage was in French, considered a classy touch, I think. Later that second language was changed to Spanish.

Today, dozens and dozens of Hampton Jitney coaches ply back and forth between the Hamptons and New York City every day. Jim Davidson sold the company to Missy and Brent Lynch, whose sons Geoff and Andrew Lynch run it today. It is punctually on time almost every time, leaves and returns from Manhattan on almost an hourly basis, and now takes Hamptonites to Boston, and in the winter both Florida and Stratton Mountain Vermont. Guests are offered snacks and soft drinks and, on the Jitney Ambassador luxury service, also wine. Earphones are offered to anyone who wants to watch the overhead movie. All this with daily bus cleanings and a special protocol for the COVID-19 crisis.

So that is how a jitney service that didn't work became, a few years later, something that did. And how the Jitney got its name.

Interestingly, at the present time, the Hampton Jitney is testing an app called "Jitney Jumper," where you can book a fare between the hamlets of Southampton to Montauk on the existing schedule. They are going back to their roots.

When Skies Are Gray, Look for 'Colors of Hope'

People have been

will give them a

WORKS BY ARTIST ALLIANCE OF EAST HAMPTON MEMBERS NADINE DASKALOFF AND FRANK SOFO, AVAILABLE IN THE "COLORS OF HOPE" VIRTUAL SHOW

he Artists Alliance of East Hampton (AAEH) is taking its first step into the digital world with its inaugural virtual show Colors of Hope, opening Saturday, August 1 and remaining on view through Labor Day.

Serving as a replacement for the annual Fourth of July exhibition at Ashawagh Hall, Colors of Hope draws inspiration from the pandemic, with the name of the show clearly stating its intention to be a bright spot in dark times. "We wanted to do something to give people hope, and we gave a lot of the artists hope by doing it," says AAEH President and virtual show participant Mary Milne. "People have been feeling somewhat isolated, and Colors of Hope will give them a little pleasure, a little joy.' The exhibition features the works of the alliance's talented roster of East End artists-comprising masters and up-and-comers working in a wide variety of media-who will each present five of their best works. Unlike past AAEH shows, the virtual nature of Colors of Hope grants participants much more freedom to display the pieces they want, without space limitations. "We have 37 artists, so they can usually only do two pieces tops, and we have to regulate the size. Whereas online, the work that they can show can be any size," Milne explains, noting that the virtual show gives sculptors like Michael Cardacino a chance to present works that are too large for the annual

Ashawagh Hall show. Among the Colors of Hope participants are several past Dan's Papers cover artists such as Casey Chalem Anderson, Donna Corvi, Frank Latorre and Frank Sofo. Other participating artists include Mary Ahern, Sheril Antonio, Beth Barry, Donna Bernstein, Barbara Bilotta, Rosalind Brenner, Richard Lance Corey, Nadine

Lawler, Marie Lombardi, Veronica Mahoney, Lynn Martell, Joanna McCarthy, visit aaeh.org.

Guests who peruse the virtual show will discover a sample artwork and bio for each of the 37 participating artists, and when they click on an artist's image, it will reveal their five featured works. "We're hoping that people will treat it like a gallery show—that they'll take the time to look individually at the people's work and consider their bios," Milne says. "I've been looking at a lot of different galleries online, and I enjoy seeing them. Hopefully, people enjoy seeing ours!" All art displayed is for sale, and guests should contact the artists directly to discuss price and purchasing. As a nonprofit, volunteer-based organization, the AAEH does not take a cut of sales and ensures that 100% of the proceeds go to the artist making the sale.

Established in 1984 by the Jimmy Ernst Artists Alliance, the AAEH works to strengthen and support East End artists through exhibitions, art lectures and other events, and it's always looking for new artist memberships. "You don't have to be a known artist to join the Artists Alliance of East Hampton," Milne points out. "People start out in it and stay with it for decades!" The alliance is currently working out safe ways to bring in-person exhibitions to the Hamptons in the coming months.

Self-taught artist Heidi Lechner, whose work first appeared on the cover of Dan's Papers in 2017, incorporates elements of whimsy and impressionism into

What was the inspiration for this piece?

Painted symbolically as a self-portrait, because I adore the sea, it is my reprieve. I was inspired by a favorite beach named Lashley, located in the Hamptons, where I have often rested at the jetty.

Talk about your art style.

I work mainly in realism. I adore Impressionism as well, but tend to prefer to capture people and things as they are.

Tell us about your artistic process.

I work in all mediums, all themes. However, my passions are with wildlife, mainly big cats. But you will find my most recent work in portraiture. The most recent paintings you see are with acrylic paint, as I enjoy working quickly. Recently, I have been sketching portraiture with graphite

If you weren't an artist what would you be doing?

I love singing/songwriting, but most of all, my dream was always to be a comedic actress.

What inspires you the most?

My perpetual love for animals and nature.

Discover Grape Pie and More at 1760 Homestead Farm

1760 HOMESTEAD FARM IN NORTHVILLE

f you've ever driven by 1760 Homestead Farm on Sound Avenue in Northville, you've likely noticed a sign for grape pie. The sweet, delicious pie is most certainly a draw and great attraction for customers, but only scratches the surface of what 1760 Homestead Farm has to offer, from toxin-free produce to a fascinating history that dates back to—you guessed it—1760.

Larry Kaiser and his wife, Margaret Feinberg, are only the fourth owners of 5412 Sound Avenue in 270 years. "My wife and I owned a landscape company and wanted to expand to do more growing," says Kaiser. "Riverhead town ordinance said you needed a certain amount of acres to do greenhouses and so on and so forth. The property came on the market and through normal negotiations we were able to purchase it, but we didn't realize how much history came with the farm." Built in 1760, the spot is the oldest standing homestead on Sound Avenue, on the list of Riverhead Town Landmarks and Historic Districts and was originally known as the Samuel Wells House. Kaiser and Feinberg purchased the property from the widow of George Tuthill, whose family owned the farm from 1865 to 2013, and wanted to honor the long history of the homestead. "When Margaret and I decided we were going to bring it back as a farm, we had to give it a name, so that's where 1760 Homestead Farm came from," Kaiser explains. "We worked the land and were able to put up some greenhouses and petitioned the state to have it redesignated as a working farm and we met all

Kaiser and Feinberg set out to make 1760 Homestead

Farm not only organic but toxin-free. "Even with organic, there's some mild-use pesticide, but it's still pesticide," he explains. We went the extreme [route] and went toxin-free. We don't spray anything. A lot of it's through cultural management and hand weeding and handwork." The farm is filled with heirloom vegetables, cut flowers, perennial herbs and more. Thanks to the flowers, Kaiser and Feinberg have developed a bee yard with 12 beehives and make honey on-site.

The grape pie came about when Kaiser looked to his background as a baker to develop baked goods for the farmstand. "Once we had the farm status, the state said we could set up a farmstand with baked goods," he explains. "I had family in the Finger Lakes Region, where the grape pie originated. They let me bring it to Long Island and make it my own." Kaiser now purchases grape pressings from the Finger Lakes from a purveyor that sells grapes for commercial grape juice to make the pie on-site. "Everything is homebaked at the farm. We sell thousands through the course of the season."

While Kaiser has worked as a landscaper and a baker, farming is his passion. "Margaret's father owned Southampton Produce back in the day and was a potato farmer in Bridgehampton," he explains. "My grandfather was a farmer in Port Jefferson Station back in the '50s, so it's in our blood. And now our son, who's 28, has decided to start growing potatoes. I laugh because I said, 'Your grandfather is smiling from Heaven.'"

Despite being a smaller farm, 1760 Homestead Farm was able to flourish during the quarantine thanks to all the produce and baked goods on offer. "It, honestly, was a boon for us because people were seeking out real food," says Kaiser, "especially when everything from it all,

was closed. We were the only thing that was open because we were deemed essential because we were growing food. We saw a great increase in sales of yams, jellies, pies, honey, vegetables... you name it."

Visitors are welcome to explore the lovely hidden gem that is 1760 Homestead Farm. "We're trying to create a destination where you can come in on weekends, grab a pie, sit at the picnic area, stroll through the cutting beds and see a small-scale working farm," says Kaiser. "We're constantly evolving and there's always something to see at the farm and, really, if you want to get away from it all, this is our little slice of Heaven that we let people in on."

A Wondrous North Fork Adventure Begins in Southold

WHAT TREASURES WILL YOU FIND ON A GREENIE SUPPLY & TACKLE TREASURE HUNT?

hile creative director Bill Moulton, who splits his time between Brooklyn and East Marion, has worked on highly successful commercial campaigns for the likes of Google, Target and more, his true passion is found in an unassuming vending machine tucked away at the Port of Egypt Marina in Southold. The vending machine, known as Greenie Supply & Tackle, houses maps that take participants on an adventure through the North Fork to find buried treasure. The maps will take intrepid treasure hunters through some of the most beautiful spots on North Fork beaches and locales and end with mysterious artifacts that are made to further pique the imagination.

For Moulton, Greenie Supply & Tackle is a labor of love. "I started as a painter and studied that in college and I've always just kind of lived a creative life," says Moulton. "This is another extension of that." The idea for Greenie Supply & Tackle came from a series of short, nautical-themed films Moulton directed five years ago called Tales from Mt. Striper Surf. "They're all around this kind of romanticized fishing and nautical adventure and self-discovery and they're kind of like newsreel films to promote this idea of imagination and adventure and fishing," Moulton says. Moulton added the fictitious Greenie Supply & Tackle as a "sponsor" at the end of the films. After releasing the films online, Moulton found that viewers were asking about where to find the mysterious tackle shop. "I really love it when things exist in digital media or in the imagination and [think about] trying to merge them with reality," he says. "People get excited when they realize that something really odd or fun exists in real life. I started thinking about how I could make it a real store."

But rather than opening an actual tackle shop, Moulton thought about how he could make something tangible that maintained the concept's initial mystique.

"The smallest store that I could imagine was a vending machine!" says Moulton. "I don't know where it came from exactly, but I thought, wouldn't it be fun to make this store a vending machine that just pops up suddenly? Maybe there are items you have to find buried in the sand somewhere." During the machine's first year outside the Orient Country Store, Moulton printed 100 maps and buried 100 treasures, which he admits was a massive undertaking.

The treasures themselves were created from items Moulton and his wife, Heather Kosch, found at yard sales. "I'd find these things just around," he says. "I love to go to yard sales, it's a passion, so my wife and I would find these fun things—I'd find a little medallion or something and write a story about the medallion as if it was the captain of a sea ship writing about it. I'd find old photographs and write on the back of them and so you'd find these objects. You place this significance around them and some importance based around the story and your adventure going to find it."

The project has been a great success, and Moulton has gotten great feedback from the community. "Ultimately what I realized after that first year was that not just kids but whole families were going to do it together," he says. "They

change your day,

to step out of your routine and try something new.

do it together," he says. "They leave reality for an hour and do something together that kind of just sparks their imagination. That was the whole point."

The phrase "change your day forever" is on the back of each map. For Moulton, that's his goal. "That's the idea," he says. "To change your day, to step out of your routine and try something new. I think that's what people really respond to—how fun that could be and how we forget there's something special in life activating your imagination. It's just wonderful to feel that people are finding joy in it."

What are some popular current trends you see in appliances?

Over the years we have seen many colors come and go. I recall when avocado green or harvest gold was the hot thing then came bisque. Stainless steel came in the early 2000s led by the Frigidaire pro line and we never looked back. Although seen as a fad, it never went away and is as strong as ever. Stainless appliances account for 80% of all our appliances sold. Black stainless, a fairly new color, has been doing well but is still only about 5% of the overall business. A big trend today is the flush inset appliances. Many designers are trying to hide the appliances by not having them stand out as much and covering them with the matching cabinets. Even appliances with no handles have become very popular. They are being made with push to open features, so it's very minimalistic and hidden in the kitchen. This has been very popular for now and I am sure in the next few years we will see something else come along to take that over. Appliance manufacturers are constantly putting money into R&D so they can have the next best appliance that everyone wants. Whirlpool has scan and cook. You scan the barcode in the oven from the packaging and it will set the time and temperature for you. No guesswork is needed. Wifi connected appliances are in their infancy but I envision in the future when you say, "Alexa cook the steak. I'll be home at 6 p.m." and when you get home the food is done for you. I am sure this is already in the works!

Tell us about being a supplier for The Price Is Right.

Being a big fan of The Price Is Right growing up, I cannot believe 30 years later I am actually supplying many prizes for them all over the country. About eight years ago, I noticed they were missing the major appliance category consistently on the show.

I reached out to the show, struck a deal and the rest is history. We send over 100 appliances a year to winning contestants all around the United States via our website delivery services. The only downside is being a supplier myself or anyone in my family or employees can never be on the show. So, the dream of, "Come on down, you're the next contestant" will not be there for me. The relationship is strong, and I have been invited to come for a private tour of the set any time I want so that is a nice bonus. Cannot wait to go and spin the big wheel!

What are some essentials you recommend for outdoor entertaining?

The outdoor kitchen is now an extension of the indoor one. We see people building some over the top entertaining areas. You always start with the grill size and work out from there. Decide who your guests will be and how your family will be using it. A grill is a must, then we work into side burners, power burners, refrigeration, and storage. An outdoor waterproof TV is a great addition as there is nothing better to watch a game outdoors while drinking a cold drink from the outdoor fridge and ice from your outdoor ice maker. We have some pre-made islands as well for the consumer who wants a quick solution. We sell grills from $399 on a Weber to a $25,000 Kalamazoo and everything in between. Plesser's is your source for all budget levels and products. We carry it all from today's top brands.

Beware.

Most people are bitten by ticks picked up in their own yard. Ticks can spread serious diseases to people and pets. A single tick bite could put you at risk for six different diseases such as Lyme Disease, Babesiosis and Ehrlichiosis, among others. Warm winters have led to an explosion in ticks which are now a year-round threat. According to scientists at Stony Brook University, "Tick-borne infections have reached epidemic proportions on LI." You can prevent illness by checking your body carefully, promptly removing any ticks found and showering soon after spending time outdoors. Ticks cannot fly or jump. They must make direct contact with a host (that's you) and feed slowly until engorged with blood.

Now more than ever, protect your family.

Since 1997, East End Tick & Mosquito Control has provided the most effective tick-prevention program possible, using the most environmentally-responsible methods available. Tick and mosquito control is our only business, not a sideline like it is for so many others claiming to be "experts." Now more than ever, knowledge and experience matters. We're serious about your safety. Let us help you keep your family safe. Call us today for a free estimate.

Meet the Expert Brian Kelly, Twin Forks Pest Control

How can a homeowner keep their pets and kids safe while preventing outdoor pests?

Safety is paramount and we take all precautions to keep our clients safe while providing superior service.

What are some current "frequent offenders" on the East End?

We find mice are very common critters that just about everyone will encounter sooner or later, especially in the colder months when they begin looking for shelter to call home. Rats and mice are trying to protect themselves from predators, which is why they gravitate towards your home. They find their way into your home through cracks and crevices in the walls, floors, foundations or any small or large gaps around the exterior foundation by water pipes, electrical wires, windows and even doorways. Once inside, they'll create nests and will multiply in the warmth of your home, garage, shed, basement or any other sheltered environment they can find. Rats are also notorious for carrying diseases and their razor sharp teeth can destroy everything in their path, causing destruction to your property.

What should a homeowner do if they think there are dangerous vermin on their property?

Call a professional! Long Island is home to several different species of rodents, and some of them can cause devastating effects to your home if they go untreated.

How can a homeowner be proactive to avoid having a pest problem?

Monthly preventative applications for mice, spiders, ants etc. will prevent an infestation. If you suspect you have an infestation of any sort, we recommended calling a professional as soon as possible.

What are some services you recommend ALL homeowners use?

Pests multiply quickly, most of our clients have us visit once a month to inspect and treat any issues found to prevent any sort of infestation from starting.

High-End Community Living at Country Pointe Meadows

COUNTRY POINTE MEADOWS CONTAINS VILLAS, TOWNHOMES AND A BEAUTIFUL CLUBHOUSE

Steven Dubb, principal at The Beechwood Organization, talks about the new Yaphank development Country Pointe Meadows and why it's a great fit for homeowners looking for a high-end community with close proximity to the East End, how the group is handling social distancing and more.

Tell us about the development of Country Pointe Meadows and how you approached designing this community.

We have a lot of experience on Long Island designing active adult—or 55-plus—lifestyle communities and are known for it. We've developed over 60 communities since my father, Michael Dubb, established Beechwood in 1985.

Though we are now seeing increased interest from New Yorkers wanting to move east, most of our buyers are Long Islanders. They are "rightsizing" from their big family, house but want to remain on the island near friends and family. They are typically empty nesters, couples or singles, who want a new home at great value with low real estate taxes. They also want carefree living, no more shoveling snow, mowing the lawn, leaky roofs or basements. They want brand new homes with airy open floor plans, not too far from friends and family and close to highways, shopping, beaches and recreation. That was what was so attractive about this location.

At Country Pointe Meadows in Yaphank, we're building 400 new condominium homes. This is the for-sale component of The Boulevard, a master plan village, located on the former site of Yaphank's Parr Meadows Racetrack. It's adjacent to greenbelt trails and dedicated open space in Suffolk County's Town of Brookhaven, just off the Long Island Expressway at exit 68N and the William Floyd Parkway. The development is hailed for its traditional neighborhood design and smart growth principles. Residents can walk, bike or drive to nearby offices, shops, restaurants, hospitality, public parks and open space across the entire 322 acres.

The grounds our homes are built on are spacious and sprawling, beautifully landscaped and include a gazebo, ponds and dog parks. The 11,000-square-foot clubhouse is a centerpiece where homeowners can socialize but also exercise.

There are townhomes and villas. What was the thinking behind making these distinct styles?

We have villas—spacious apartment style homes for single floor living—on the ground floor or second floor. We also have townhomes with living space spanning two or three levels.

Homes range from 1,470 to over 2,100 square feet of living space with two bedrooms and two or two-and-a-half baths, a loft, a den, a full-basement with the option for it to be finished, and one- or two-car garages. Buyers also get to personalize their homes working with our Design Center to choose their own designer fittings and finishes for the kitchen and bathrooms.

What makes Country Pointe Meadows special and unique in the real estate market?

For those who work, play or want to visit friends or family in the Hamptons, North Fork or parts west, they may not realize how close Yaphank really is. Exit 68 off the LIE is under 20 minutes east to Riverhead and under 30 minutes west to Huntington's 110 Corridor. So it's about location for sure but also the cost of living, in a quality constructed home with great quality of life.

Community living is more affordable than one may realize at first. Many are surprised to learn the move to a 55-plus community will actually save them money. If you make a line-by-line cost comparison of monthly carrying costs, between owning one's existing family home and a new home in one of our communities, there are savings to be made on landscaping, pool maintenance, snow and refuse removal, homeowner insurance, security systems and gym/club memberships. Taxes are also comparatively less in community life. So our owners spend less and worry less with great quality of life. I like to refer to Country Pointe Meadows as a hidden gem.

Prices start in the upper-$400,000s for single-level living villas and the low $500,000s for townhomes with ground-floor master suites. Taxes start at around $3,700 for homeowners who qualify for the NY STAR program.

Talk about the importance of the Clubhouse and its features and amenities.

At the center of the community is a state-of-theart 11,000-square-foot community clubhouse with a ballroom, card rooms, sports lounge with bar, fitness room, treatment room, concierge, activities director, two outdoor heated swimming pools plus tennis and bocce ball courts. Right now we're all socially distancing so we've moved many of the features outside from exercise equipment to seating areas. When we can get back, residents will be meeting their neighbors at the bar for cocktails, playing cards, watching a football game or taking an exercise class.

Why is Country Pointe Meadows a great fit for someone 55 and up?

Our homeowners enjoy making new friends and keeping busy. Their new carefree lifestyle is almost like being on vacation, free of the burden of home maintenance. They also enjoy living in brand new homes at this stage in their lives.
